Nanotechnology and Art Mix in Museum Exhibit

UCLA faculty and students collaborated again with the Los Angeles County Museum of Art (LACMA) on a 10-month-long exhibition entitled “NANO.” The exhibit, which opened in December, includes installations developed by a group of UCLA media artists, nano-scientists and humanities experts. More than 100,000 visitors of all ages are expected to attend the LACMA Lab production.

For more information on the NANO exhibit, visit the UCLA School of Arts and Architecture NANO Web site or the LACMA Web site.
